Many people who use self storage don't own a car. Moving stuff is a lot easier using mass transit, and so locating self storage near transit makes it a lot more convenient. If industrial land is scarce, I don't see why the allowed density cannot be increased. Self storage complexes can be very land efficient if stacked vertically. In my opinion, this is central planning that is out of touch with the people demanding self storage in accessible locations.	James Tang		s.22(1)	I do not live in Vancouver	No web attachments.
