Subject: Notice of Public Hearing Joyce-Collingwood Station Plan

There was a former acknowledgement by the City of Vancouver council, who voted unanimously and formally declared the City is on unceded Aboriginal territory. Would the Vancouver Planning Department please explain why the Public/me has input into this new plan when nobody was authorized to carve up Indigenous Lands under the old plan?

“Underlying all other truths spoken during the Year of Reconciliation is the truth that the modern city of Vancouver was founded on the traditional territories of the Musqueam, Squamish and Tsleil-Waututh First Nations and that these territories were never ceded through treaty, war or surrender,” reads part of the motion from the city”

I will attend the Hearing on September 9, 2016 during the tiny allotted time period for Public comments, between 5:30 and 6:00 PM to hear the planning department's response.
