I am opposed to the large scale development at the above address for the following reasons:

The buildings are too high and will cast shadows on the buildings further back.

They will obstruct water views of a great many East Vancouver residents.

The tall buildings are all on downtown Vancouver side. If council thinks that high-rises by the water are such a great idea why did they not do the same thing in the Olympic Village and False Creek side?

There are hardly any high-rises on the west side and they must bear their share of high-rises and social housing.

There are far too many social housing projects in the area near BC Place and it is time other neighbourhoods accept their share rather than creating a ghetto in this area.

What is the city getting from the developer to change the zoning?

I would like a call back. I have made several calls to Penny Ballam and even though I have paid over $21,000 in property taxes last year to the City of Vancouver I have not heard back from her. I am disappointed with the response from City Hall.
