I am opposed to such low density use for this unique site.

This educational institution occupies 4 adjacent civic blocks in a very central area of Vancouver/Richmond.

From 49th to 51st is the same distance as between east and west mall at point grey campus of UBC.

The frontage on 49th is as far as from the Chan to well beyond University boulevard.

UBC's point grey population is now 44,000.

A huge proportion of these people live south of 41st, including Richmond, or east of Cambie.

Transportation to point grey is being touted as a reason to spend a ten figure sum on a subway, which would eventually be extended further west.

Wouldn't it make more sense to locate some 1st and 2nd year students at 49th and Cambie,

on an existing subway line?

A building such as Buchanan One would probably fit where one of these buildings is planned.
