Meeting Date: January 19, 2016

TO: Vancouver City Council
FROM: Acting City Manager
SUBJECT: Truth and Reconciliation Commission Calls to Action

RECOMMENDATION

- A. THAT Council receive this report for information.
- B. THAT Council adopt in principle the City's response to 27 out of the 94 Truth and Reconciliation Commission Calls to Action with the identification of 41 City actions under 3 themes: Healthy Communities and Wellness; Achieving Indigenous Human Rights and Recognition; and, Advancing Awareness, Knowledge, and Capacity.

REPORT SUMMARY

This report provides the City of Vancouver's review of the Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) 94 Calls to Action report, and identifies where the City has the jurisdiction and ability to implement those Calls to Action.

Throughout the summer of 2015 City staff from across departments discussed the 94 TRC Calls to Action and provided an overview on which Calls to Action are within the City's jurisdiction to act. This coordinated effort has found that the City can initially respond to 27 out of the 94 TRC Calls to Action, through the identification of 41 City actions that have been aligned under 3 themes: Healthy Communities and Wellness; Achieving Indigenous Human Rights and Recognition; and, Advancing Awareness, Knowledge, and Capacity. This report outlines how the response to the Calls to Action can be delivered.

Council can also access details on additional reconciliation activities through the City of Reconciliation 2014-2016 report, where further actions and areas of work have been identified. These activities support our goals as a City of Reconciliation, but do not align with the Calls to Actions of the TRC.

COUNCIL AUTHORITY/PREVIOUS DECISIONS

Council has requested that staff report back on the City of Vancouver's assessment of the June 2015 Truth and Reconciliation Commission's 94 Calls to Action report, and identify where the City has the jurisdiction and ability to implement those Calls to Action.

At its meeting on February 26, 2013, Vancouver City Council passed the motion to proclaim June 21, 2013 to June 20, 2014, as the Year of Reconciliation in Vancouver, and endorsed the United Nations Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples. On June 20, 2013 Council officially announced the Proclamation in an intercultural celebration and dialogue event co-hosted with Reconciliation Canada and attended by local and provincial First Nation and multicultural leaders.

On July 23, 2013 Council supported the initiatives of Truth and Reconciliation Canada and Reconciliation Canada during Reconciliation Week 2013 by approving an overall budget amount of $535,000 to offset expenses related to permits, installation of banners, rental of PNE facilities and associated operation costs.

On July 8, 2014, after a successful year of engaging with Aboriginal communities and all Vancouverites to participate in City services, events and programs during the Year of Reconciliation, Vancouver City Council passed the motion to reaffirm its commitment to designate Vancouver as a City of Reconciliation. The City of Reconciliation framework will initially guide the work of the City to best serve First Nations and Urban Aboriginal communities.

CITY MANAGER'S/GENERAL MANAGER'S COMMENTS

Although the majority of the TRC Calls to Action were not directed towards municipalities, the City has an important role to play in the implementation of recommendations. The City of Vancouver assessed each recommendation using the principle of acting "in the spirit of reconciliation" and determined that the City has the jurisdiction to respond to 27 of the TRC Calls to Action through 41 City actions, as themed under 3 areas: Healthy Communities and Wellness; Achieving Indigenous Human Rights and Recognition; and, Advancing Awareness, Knowledge, and Capacity. The Acting City Manager recommends approval of the foregoing.

REPORT

Background/Context

The growing awareness of the devastating effects of colonization and residential schools, including racism, poverty, and poor health outcomes is the result of courageous and vocal residential school survivors who have long advocated for this history to be told. It is the acknowledgement of these stories, along with the recognition of First Nations and Aboriginal people's rights, strengths and contributions to the social, economic and cultural development of Canada that has helped to foster the conditions for reconciliation and healing to emerge and become a national priority. The impact of residential schools has left a legacy of tragic injustice, affecting generation after generation of Aboriginal people and their communities. The majority of Aboriginal peoples in Vancouver say they have been affected by Indian residential schools, either personally or through a family member.

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission was created in 2008 as part of the settlement agreement between the Federal Government, the churches and survivor parties to the Indian Residential Schools Class Action Settlement Agreement to determine the truth about Canada's Indian Residential Schools and establish a reconciliation process.

According to the TRC website, for over 100 years, more than 150,000 Aboriginal children were removed from their families and sent to residential schools. The government-funded, church-run schools were located across Canada and established to eliminate parental involvement in the spiritual, cultural and intellectual development of Aboriginal children. The last residential school closed in 1996.

In 2008, the Prime Minister of Canada issued an apology for Canada's role in imposing the residential school system on Aboriginal families. The federal government then supported the creation of the TRC, part of whose mandate was to collect stories of residential school survivors for the next five years. The work of drawing attention to the impacts of residential schools, and for public awareness on this important, yet regrettable part of Canada's history needs to continue on beyond the initial mandate of the TRC.

In October 2012, in response to the TRC's plan to hold a national event in Vancouver, the City of Vancouver declared a week of reconciliation activities to take place from September 16-22, 2013, with public events hosted by The Truth and Reconciliation Commission of Canada and Reconciliation Canada.

From September 17 - 21, 2013 the Truth and Reconciliation Commission held their sixth national event at the PNE grounds, where those affected by the legacy of Residential Schools shared their experiences with the Commission and the public. More than 40,000 people attended the event, including 5,000 students from across B.C. who participated in activities about residential schools.

On September 22, 2013 more than 70,000 people weathered the rain to demonstrate their commitment to reconciliation at Reconciliation Canada's Walk for Reconciliation, including Aboriginal peoples and Vancouver residents from all backgrounds. After a keynote speech by Dr. Bernice King (Dr. Martin Luther King's daughter) the historic walk began, representing both the end of Reconciliation Week and a new beginning for Aboriginal Peoples and all Canadians. The event was voted as the #2 Top Newsmaker of the Year 2013 by CBC News Vancouver.

Since the conclusion of Reconciliation Week, the City has committed to ensuring that the collective efforts of revitalizing the relationship between Aboriginal peoples and Canadian society is not limited to the Aboriginal community or the TRC alone. The work of reconciliation requires long term determination, and its goals will take the commitment of multiple generations, but when it is achieved, it will make for a better, stronger country.

On June 2, 2015 the City of Vancouver partnered with Reconciliation Canada, SFU, and the Laurier Institute to host a community gathering that could witness the launch of the TRC Calls to Action report, being live streamed in Ottawa. The Mayor, along with prominent leaders such as Jody Wilson-Raybould were in attendance to provide their reaction to the TRC Calls to Action.

In 2014 Council approved the Healthy City Strategy (HCS) and in 2015 Council approved the first four year action plan. The Healthy City Strategy vision is a Healthy City for All: a city where together we are creating and continually improving the conditions that enable all of us to enjoy the highest level of health and well-being possible. Reconciliation is an integral part of the Healthy City Strategy goals to promote safety, a sense of inclusion, and to build connections between communities and individuals.

The inter-departmental staff team undertaking Reconciliation work will be implementing the foregoing initiatives in response to 27 identified TRC Calls for Action that fall within the City's jurisdiction to act. In total 41 actions have been identified by City departments, some which have been recently completed and others to commence in 2016. Details of initiatives and actions taken up by City departments are described in Appendix A, and organized under 3 themes: Healthy Communities and Wellness; Achieving Indigenous Human Rights and Recognition; and, Advancing Awareness, Knowledge, and Capacity.

FINANCIAL

For the most part, implementation of these recommendations will be included in the work of City Departments and does therefore not require additional funding. The components that do require additional funding in 2016 will be identified and resourced from within existing 2016 operating and capital budgets. Any future components of this work that require funding will be brought forward to Council through future budget processes.

CONCLUSION

The Truth and Reconciliation Commission's closing event and release of their final report in Ottawa on December 15, 2015 marked the end of a significant journey for the Commissioners, and a time for the rest of us to build upon the important foundation that has been set for reconciliation between Indigenous peoples and all Canadians.

A City of Reconciliation benefits all, and the TRC Calls to Action is central to achieving our goals. The past few years where the City has engaged in a number of activities to learn about the impacts of the residential schools, at the same time to explore and experience the possibilities of a City that embraces Indigenous cultures and peoples, has meaningfully changed us as an institution and as a community of staff.

The Vancouver Park Board has recently released their report on how they plan to implement the TRC Calls to Action. They have identified 11 areas where the TRC and a reconciliation focus will strengthen their work and the report can be read here: <http://former.vancouver.ca/parks/board/2016/20160111/REPORT-TRCCallsToAction-20160111.pdf>.

What we have heard is that our commitment to providing city staff with cultural competency training on Indigenous communities and peoples will in time improve the quality of services that are provided for all, and identify Vancouver as a unique place on earth. That our growing knowledge of Indigenous communities, cultures, worldviews, and histories will strengthen our City and the country.

Vancouver is a young place in comparison to the Musqueam, Squamish, and Tsleil-Waututh First Nations who have cared for these lands and waters since time immemorial. It is time that this City recognize how much greater it could be by the acknowledgment of these Nations - important work that is already underway through our growing relations and aspirations with reconciliation.

The TRC has provided us with perhaps the hardest truths about this country ever confronted. The injustices faced by generations of residential school survivors continue to impact Indigenous communities today. There is a role for the City in supporting reconciliation efforts for those wrongs. The TRC also presented us with possibilities to be our best selves, and a greater City that reflects the diversity of Indigenous peoples and cultures.

In closing, it is important that we thank the TRC Commissioners and the TRC staff for their work. It is the City of Vancouver's commitment that their legacy will continue through our efforts as a City of Reconciliation, and a city that strives to be a greater place because of it and a healthy city for all.
