s.22(1) Personal and Confidential

To the Mayor and Council,

I recently received a notice of public hearing regarding rezoning in the Grandview-Woodland community.

The notice indicated new zones RM-11, RM-11N and RM-12N were being created and I was interested to know the rules regarding construction in these new zones –especially in regards to building access and the need to provide off street parking - but an extensive search of the City of Vancouver website turned up nothing.

I then noticed that the “draft by-law” – which I can only assume contains the details of these new zones – was available for personal viewing only at City Hall.

Can I ask why the draft by-law is not published online?

There are a large number of seniors living in the Grandview-Woodland community and it seems to be a great inconvenience to force them to go to City Hall to see the draft by-law.

Or is that the intention?

Best Regards,

Alan Hazlewood

Attachments: Notice of Public Hearing; This email account is no longer monitored

To whom it may concern,

I received the subject notice in the mail last week and responded with the attached email "Notice of Public Hearing" as directed by the "SUBMIT YOUR COMMENTS:" section in the notice.

Imagine my surprise when I received the second attached email informing me that the email address I'd been informed of just days before was no longer monitored. What a farce!

I am a senior in the Grandview-Woodlands community and all I want to do is to review the proposed changes to the by-law that will create the new RM-11, RM-11N and RM-12N zones.

Unfortunately, your notice suggests that I can only view the draft by-law in person and only at City Hall.

I have two questions:

1. Is there a specific reason as to why the draft by-law cannot be published on-line for anyone interested?
2. Is the City of Vancouver purposely making it as difficult as possible for seniors and persons with disabilities to review proposed changes to zoning in their neighbourhoods?

Regards,

Alan Hazlewood
