We have lived in Strathcona for 26 years and have watched the growth. We know we live in a neighbourhood where Hastings St is definitely underused. As we see with Strathcona Village, Hastings is changing. Our only concern would be park space. I know new buildings do have amenities like play areas and outdoor spaces but it does not take the place of an actual park. We live right on "s. 22(1) Personal and Confidential" and know how overused this small park is. ~~The~~ The closest other park is Strathcona Park and just check your notes to see how under used that park is due to Prior Street being too busy and dangerous to cross, especially for seniors. So as Hastings gets developed can the developers be asked to put money into a new park in the area? That would be our suggestion as to how to incorporate the influx of new people to the community.
