I understand the urgent need for more rental space, but has the City struck a devil's bargain with would-be developers of such rental accommodation. I can understand that construction might be cheaper if the ediface is high and plain. However, must it be so ugly. It looks like a housing development out of the Bronx or one of those crime-ridden English housing estates. I would suggest a substantial design face-lift with innovative detailing, hanging gardens or wonderful graphics, murals and signage.	denise jacques		"s.22(1) Personal and Confidential"	Riley Park	No web attachments.
