SUBJECT: 2026 Property Tax Exemption – Seniors Housing

Recommendations

THAT Council approve, in principle, the by-law for 2026 Property Tax Exemption - Seniors Housing attached as Appendix A;

FURTHER THAT Council instruct the Director of Legal Services to bring forward for enactment a by-law generally in accordance with Appendix A.

Purpose and Executive Summary

This report seeks Council approval and enactment of the annual by-law that grants a permissive tax exemption to certain legacy seniors housing properties, as set out in Appendix A.

Prior to 1974, seniors housing and community care facilities in Vancouver were subject to a statutory tax exemption. The Province then amended the Vancouver Charter, transferring the exemption authority to Council and subsequently clarifying that an annual by-law is required to effect such exemption. In 1994, Council enacted the first permissive exemption by-law for 39 legacy seniors housing properties that had been in existence prior to 1974 and had previously been exempt from taxation by statute. Since then, a similar by-law has been enacted every year, following the annual review of the status of each facility to confirm eligibility, with the number of qualified properties gradually decreasing over time.

As seniors' facilities on the legacy list continue to age, more redevelopment activities are starting to affect status and eligibility for the exemption. In 2025 three properties have either had the issuance of demolition permits in support of redevelopment plans or have completed construction on planned redevelopment. With these three properties no longer eligible for the exemption in 2026, there are now 32 legacy seniors housing properties that continue to qualify for the property tax exemption. This provides an estimated forgone general purpose tax levy, based on 2025 assessments and tax rates, totalling $1.2 million. Any foregone taxes are redistributed to non-exempt properties.

The City offers various incentives to support the development of new or expanded social housing (including seniors social housing), such as provision for increased height and density, Community Amenity Contributions (CAC) and Development Contribution Levies (DCL) exemptions, Community Housing Incentive Program (CHIP) grants, and the provision of City land.

Council Authority/Previous Decisions

On February 23, 1995, Council adopted the policy that the 39 legacy seniors housing properties retain their exempt status, subject to an annual by-law reflecting any changes to the status of the properties and that seniors' housing projects constructed after March 31, 1974, not be considered eligible for the exemption.

On September 22, 2011 (RTS 08713), Council adopted the policy to support not-for-profit organizations through the existing range of statutory property tax exemptions available under section 396(1) of the Vancouver Charter and the City's grant programs.

On October 2, 2019 (RTS 13428), Council affirmed its policy that seniors housing projects constructed after March 31, 1974, should not be approved for permissive tax exemptions.

On October 22, 2024 (RTS 16282), Council further endorsed the parameters for determining whether tax exemption should continue or be removed in accordance with existing Council policy, including redevelopment, infill development, renovation, or change in use.

City Manager's Comments

The City Manager concurs with the foregoing recommendations.

Context and Background

Vancouver differs from other BC municipalities because it is primarily governed by the Vancouver Charter. The Vancouver Charter includes a variety of mandatory or statutory tax exemptions which are primarily administered by BC Assessment. The City's property tax exemptions are set out in sections 396 to 396F of the Vancouver Charter, which includes more statutory exemptions than the Community Charter that governs other municipalities in the province. Because of this, other municipalities in BC are more reliant upon permissive exemptions than Vancouver.

Prior to 1974, seniors housing facilities in Vancouver were granted a statutory exemption from taxes. At the time, there were 39 seniors housing facilities that met the exemption criteria. The Province then amended the Vancouver Charter, transferring the exemption decision for any new seniors housing to Council. However, the pre-existing 39 facilities continued to be exempt from property taxes. The Province later amended the Vancouver Charter again to clarify that in order for the properties to be exempt from taxation, Council had to enact a by-law granting that exemption.

In 1994, Council enacted the first permissive exemption by-law for the 39 seniors housing facilities that had been in existence and had been protected from taxation prior to 1974. In 1995, Council adopted a policy that the 39 legacy seniors housing properties retain their exempt status, subject to an annual by-law reflecting any changes to the status of the properties and that seniors' housing projects constructed after March 31, 1974, not be considered eligible for an exemption, instructing staff to communicate this policy to all future applicants.

In 2011, staff reported to Council that the City's grant programs are a more effective, flexible, transparent, and accountable process for disbursing public funds than a permissive tax exemption program. Council has since adopted the policy that the City will continue to support not-for-profit organizations through the existing range of statutory property tax exemptions available under the Vancouver Charter section 396(1) and the City's grant programs.

While the Vancouver Charter includes provisions for permissive exemptions, Council has instead chosen to rely on existing statutory exemptions and grant programs. The City continues to receive exemption requests for consideration each year, and Council relies on staff to respond by citing the existing Council policy.

In 2019, Council affirmed its policy that seniors' housing projects constructed after March 31, 1974, should not be approved for permissive tax exemptions.

Since Council enacted the first permissive exemption by-law in 1994 for the 39 seniors housing facilities, the number of eligible properties for exemption has gradually decreased to 32 in 2026. However, staff anticipate that many of these properties will continue to undergo renovation or redevelopment (for same or different housing use) in the future horizon as the buildings age.

Discussion

In 2025 three properties have either had the issuance of demolition permits in support of redevelopment plans or have completed construction on planned redevelopment and as per council-approved parameters in Oct 2024, these properties no longer qualify for the exemption.

The following principles are central to the limited nature of the City's legacy seniors housing exemption.

A) Recognize the City's role supporting seniors housing, relative to other senior levels government.

The housing and supports needed to ensure the well-being of older adults fall under multiple jurisdictions and all governments and authorities need to work together to ensure success. The newly approved Seniors Housing Strategy supports the delivery of seniors housing and care through policies that enable these developments in neighbourhoods throughout the City, and through project partnerships with senior levels of government.

The City seeks to partner with other levels of government in delivering seniors housing and care, without expanding the role of the municipality by funding services that are better provided by the provincial and federal government. The funding of health care, which includes long-term care and assisted living, is the responsibility of the provincial government.

B) Limit support to charities and non-profit organization to statutory tax exemptions and grants.

In 1995, Council adopted policy that no new seniors housing projects constructed after March 31, 1974 should be approved for permissive exemptions, and that future applicants requesting permissive tax exemptions should be denied. In 2011, after the Province introduced additional permissive tax exemption authority for non-profits, Council established a policy to limit the support for charitable and not-for-profit organizations to the existing range of statutory exemptions available under the Vancouver Charter and utilize the City's grant programs rather than providing new permissive exemptions. In 2019, Council reaffirmed the policy, adopted by Council in 1995, that seniors housing projects constructed after March 31, 1974, should not be approved for a permissive tax exemption.

The City provides various incentives to support development for new or expanded social housing including provisions for increased height and density, CAC and DCL exemptions, Community Housing Incentive Program (CHIP) grants, and the provision of City land. These contributions help improve the viability and sustainability of affordable housing projects with flexible, predictable upfront funding whereas permissive tax exemptions are not guaranteed. These capital grant contributions are also supported through development contributions and the empty homes tax rather than the general property tax levy.

Financial Implications

The estimated forgone general purpose tax levy from the legacy seniors housing exemption is $1.2 million, based on 2025 assessments and tax rates, representing approximately 0.10% of the overall levy. Any foregone taxes are redistributed to non-exempt properties.

Legal Implications

If the Recommendation in this report is approved by Council, Council will enact a by-law granting tax exemptions to certain seniors' housing. The proposed by-law is authorized by section 396F of the Vancouver Charter and grants a tax exemption to the named properties in Appendix A.
