What was submitted in Feb This year is a great product from all the work before. I work as a quality control inspector for residential construction in the Lower Mainland, I can confidently say that this is an important development for the COV. Multi-plex construction is 100% needed, but it's the first (and simplest) step. The high streets, villages, and transit oriented development need to be streamlined. As a local I agree that infrastructure needs to grow with these developments, but after reading the development plan I'm confident that the staff is doing all they can to accomplish this. | Richard Martin | Mount Pleasant | |

| 2026-03-03 | 11:42 | City of Vancouver Official Development Plan | Support | The ODP is a thoughtful document containing thoughtful principles for Vancouver's future growth. It plans for thoughtful growth of neighbourhoods while maintaining what makes Vancouver so great. It represents a hopeful vision for a city I can see myself affording. I hope this will be a unanimous approval and that council will soon direct staff to start work on area plans for the implementation of these guidelines in neighbourhoods like mine, Dunbar. Thank you to city staff for all your hard work on this over the past 8 or so years between the Vancouver plan and the ODP! | James Madden | Dunbar-Southlands | |

| 2026-03-05 | 08:18 | City of Vancouver Official Development Plan | Support | I support the City of Vancouver Official Development Plan. Housing is very scarce in Vancouver, so rents have to rise to high levels to keep people out. Normally, high rents would lead to the construction of more housing (because it's so profitable). In Vancouver, it is so hard to build housing that this mostly doesn't happen. The reason for this is that it is very hard to build housing in Vancouver. Rent is a function of the ease of building housing and our difficult processes ensure high rents. This Plan is one step of many to simplify those processes and ultimately bring the cost of housing down. | Peter Dowdy | Renfrew-Collingwood | |
