This initiative represents a valuable opportunity to strengthen the local economy by creating jobs, attracting visitors, and increasing business for nearby shops and services. A well-planned hotel can also enhance the area's appeal, providing high-quality accommodations while contributing to improved infrastructure and public amenities. It will also have a positive impact on Vancouver's tourism sector by expanding lodging options, helping the city welcome more visitors, and supporting its reputation as a vibrant and accessible destination. The inclusion of rental housing as part of the project is especially important, as it helps address the local housing supply shortage, which will benefit the Yaletown community. With thoughtful design and responsible management, the project can integrate seamlessly into the community and reflect its character. I encourage decision-makers to consider the long-term benefits this development can bring and to move forward with careful planning and community engagement.	Cam Foster	Kitsilano

I know this from my own personal experience before moving here, and since moving here it has been challenging to get others to visit. This is an excellent part of the city to implement a hotel as it is near many amenities travelers would access.	Elliot K	Mount Pleasant

Density and building usage makes sense for this location and align with other building massing in the area. The project also provides much needed hotel rooms, particularly in the Yaletown neighborhood which is currently under served. The City should approve the application - provides reasonable density in area of the City that can easily absorb such density while also providing much needed hotel services and amenities to the community. This project has my support.	Shaun Johnston	Kitsilano

These are exactly the kind of projects Vancouver needs.	Daniel Akosa
